

Abstract of the Disclosure

A fluid delivery system including a fluid container and cannula assembly that in turn includes a separable tube portion formed of a material having a lower specific gravity than the fluid in the container that in turn 5 becomes a float within the container to improve the visibility of the fluid level therein.